By defeating the Tigers Friday night 13 to 11, the Dodgers moved up to share first place with the Tigers. The Tigers played a very good game in the absence of Mitchell, and there is little doubt that they would have won handily with their captain in the line-up. The twenty-four minutes of play resulted in a tie score, 11 to 11, and after play had been resumed Captain McGrew of the Dodgers shot a goal and the game was decided. Score, 13 to 11. This is the second tie game the Tigers have dropped since the captain's injury and retirement from the game, and all members of the team have decided that the "jinx" is following them for true.

The Dwarfs-Giants game, which was postponed from Friday night, will be played off Tuesday night. The line-up of the Dodger-Tiger game is:

Dodgers—McGrew and Denny, forwards; H. Seymour, center; Parman and Mutz, guards.

Tigers—Holmes and Carpenter, forwards; R. Miller, center; Scott and Nixon, guards.

Summary of score—Field goals, Carpenter 2, Holmes 2, Denny 2, McGrew 1. Free throws, Carpenter 2, Denny 3, Seymour 4.

One point was awarded the Tigers.

High School Notes.

Miss Hilda Lahr, a high school student and graduate of the Conservatory of Music, gave three piano solos during the assembly hour on Wednesday. The rendition of the pieces was excellent, and they were well received by the students. The pieces were "Polish Dance," by Shorwenka; "Il Trovatore," by Dorn, and "Drifting Leaves," by Matthews.

The advanced seniors have invited the spring seniors to be their guests at a Halloween party, which will be given next Monday evening. Just what the hosts and hostesses have in store for the guests is as yet a secret. But it is understood that the guests are to be on their best behavior and are not to be surprised at anything that may happen to them.

Superintendent Hawkins went to Columbia Friday evening to spend the week end with his family, who reside there.

Mrs. A. R. Perrin and Mrs. Lottie Oman, accompanied by their guest, Mrs. E. O. Goldsmith of Vicksburg, Mich., were visitors in the domestic science department this week.

John Owen Murrin, one of our last year's graduates, and Andy Chris Cummins, a former student of the high school, were visitors in assembly Friday. Both of these young men are students in St. Benedict's college in Atchison, Kan., and are home on a brief vacation.

A picnic plan by one of the sophomore classes for Saturday was postponed till a later date.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Miller returned to their home in Barnard Friday evening. Mrs. Miller attended the Christian church convention during the past week and was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Brown. Mr. Miller came Friday to attend to some business matters and accompany her home.

REPORT READY SOON

FINDING OF ENGINEERS WILL BE MADE PUBLIC SHORTLY.

MGR. STREET WENT HOME

Not Allowed to Test Standpipe and Water Pressure—Much Interest in the Coming Reports.

The report of Hiram Phillips of St. Louis and Burns & McDonald of Kansas City as to the present value of the city water company plant and as to the cost of building a new one here will be ready for the public in about two weeks, so one member of the public works board said Saturday morning. In the report will be found everything that has any bearing on the water question.

After the report is made, then definite action can be taken by the board as to either buying the old plant, if the price is reasonable, or erecting a new one.

The work, it is said, is progressing smoothly, though it is known that Manager Street did not remain to go into the details fully with the engineers as it was understood he would. It is said the water company expected access to the reports which the board of public works was unwilling to grant, and that in view of this disagreement Mr. Street withdrew and declined to grant the engineers such special favors as cutting into the mains, testing the water pressure for fire, etc. However, Mr. Street of the water company insists that he does not expect to ask any more for the water works than they are really worth. Whether his ideas on this point agree with the engineers will be disclosed when their reports are in and the views of both sides then to be expressed will make mighty interesting reading to the people of Maryville.

The Woodson Smith Hat company sued for $1,800. The $132.17 was for interest. This is the seventh suit of sixteen brought by the hat company against fire insurance companies. Six of them have been won. The rest of the suits will be tried immediately. —Kansas City Star.

A PERSONAL WORD.

The evening service of the First Methodist Episcopal church will be dispensed with tomorrow evening in honor of Dr. Luce, who closes his pastorate with the First Presbyterian church. The pastor of this church takes this opportunity to speak a word of appreciation of Dr. Luce, whom he has learned to know intimately and to love very much; a scholarly, cultured, Christian gentleman, whose life is a benediction to every one whom it touches and to every community in which it is lived. His good cheer is as refreshing as a cool breeze on a hot August day.

For many years to come there will be many in this city who can say as Tennyson said of his friend Hallam: Whatever way my days decline, I felt and feel, though left alone, His being working in my own, The footsteps of his life in mine.

This pastor thanks God for the fellowship of this princely man, and breathes at this moment a sincere and earnest prayer that the good Father of us all may have Dr. Luce and his good wife and family in His holy keeping, and in His own good time bring them and us into sweet fellowship in the church above, which is without fault before the throne of God.

MAKE UP LIFE.

Details and routine make up life and most of life's occupations. The man or woman who fails to recognize that often comes to grief. But at the same time routine is something that has to be guarded against, to avoid becoming its victim. In some professions and trades it is very hard to keep from this. In school teaching it is especially so. A former superintendent of education says that a majority of school teachers succumb to the mere routine level within three or four years, and from that time on simply are feeding material to a machine. It is pleasantest to think that is overdrawn. But it nevertheless serves to remind us of the disastrous consequences of a teacher gone to seed, so to speak. The poor pupil pays the penalty. In the end the community, of which this pupil one day becomes an integral part and to which he is supposed to contribute something vital, pays the penalty.

The person who finds contentment in his work for work's sake, that is for the sake of the good the work can be made to produce, is not likely to lapse into this state of desuetude. And more than that, one should attempt, no matter what his occupation may be, to master it and keep on growing in it and widening his sphere of influence and in time his job will get so big that he will not have time to grow dull or routine in doing it.

MOTORISTS TRY NEW STATE ROAD

Tourists Meet Enthusiastic Reception Everywhere.

GOVERNOR SPOKE AT LEXINGTON

Overflow Crowd at Courthouse Addressed by Mayor Brown of Kansas City—Borland at Glasgow.

Glasgow, Mo., Oct. 28.—Missouri's cross-state highway is no longer a state highway in name only. The motorists from Kansas City are resting in Glasgow, Boonville and Fayette after an all day's trip along flaglined roads, every foot of which had been graded and dragged. Hills which had been difficult for the motorists to climb when the inspection party first went over the route last summer had been lowered, concrete culverts had replaced ramshackle wooden structures.

But more important than the evidence of works already done was the spirit displayed by the farmers. It was distinctly a farmers' celebration, although each large town along the route had prepared a celebration for the good roads tourists. It was from the farmers that came the pledge that a highway would be built. Farm after farm was passed with the farmer not in his fields but on the road with his teams. The farmer's wife and his children were at the gate waving a flag in welcome.

The Kansas City motorists will unite at Rocheport, from where they will go to Columbia to celebrate with a similar delegation of motorists from St. Louis the formal dedication of the cross-state highway. But the farmers have dedicated it by the renewed pledge that the good roads work would continue until the highway was a permanent rock road all the way from Kansas City to St. Louis.

The courthouse was packed at Lexington, where Gov. Hadley gave a short address on good roads. The overflow crowd was entertained by Mayor Brown of Kansas City, who first led the band and then gave a talk on the importance of good roads. At Marshall, after another dinner, Gov. Hadley spoke from the courthouse steps.

The only portion of the cross-state highway not yet definitely decided upon is the river crossing. Glasgow has been chosen tentatively. Boonville wants the route to cross there.

Gov. Hadley, who had visited Glasgow before, went to Boonville. The remainder of the motor cars were equally divided between the two towns. At Glasgow the merchants had purchased a new ferry boat, which took the cars across the river in three minutes.

Congressman W. P. Borland was the chief speaker at Glasgow. Gov. Hadley spoke at Boonville and then hurried over to Fayette, where he spoke again before a large crowd on good roads.

DAKOTA LAND NOT SO VALUABLE

State Takes all the Best Land in Rosebud Lottery for School Purposes.

Gregory, S. D., Oct. 28.—Something of a sensation in connection with the Rosebud land lottery developed here when it was disclosed that 41 sections of school land have been taken by the Indian allotments.

This means that 41 sections of the best land in Mellette county will be selected by the state as Indian school lands before the settlers have a chance to file. Inasmuch as only about 30 sections are classified by the appraisers as A-1 agricultural land, it looks very much as though none of the best of the land will pass into the possession of the settlers at this time.

ASKED LIQUOR INJUNCTIONS

Judge Wallace Declares Before Supreme Court Law Fails to Stop "Blind Tigers."

Jefferson City, Oct. 28.—Judge William H. Wallace of Kansas City appeared before the supreme court in support of the injunction process of putting "blind tigers" out of business in local option counties. He declared the law is not sufficient.

Judge Wallace appeared in a case originating at Keytesville in Chariton county. There the prosecuting attorney, Roy Rucker, secured an injunction in the circuit court against W. and Aubrey Thrash and R. P. Carr to restrain them from running a restaurant which he alleged to be a "blind tiger." A temporary injunction was issued.

Ortle McManigal Testify.

Indianapolis, Oct. 28.—That Ortle H. McManigal would be subpoenaed to appear before the federal grand jury in this district early in November to testify in its investigation of the so-called McNamara dynamiting cases was reported among persons in touch with the developments in the inquiry.

TURKEY NOT SO EASY FOR ITALY

Turks Found to be Better Prepared Than Had Been Expected.

ITALIANS LOSE MANY BATTLES

Arabs Assisting Turks are Expected to Prolong War—Cholera Threatens Invaders.

London, Oct. 28.—From uncensored dispatches from Tripoli reaching England by way of Malta, which in part are confirmed by censored dispatches reaching Rome, it is apparent that Italy's campaign in Tripoli already has cost more lives than the government anticipated, while the financial outlay will greatly exceed the estimates.

The Turks with their Arab allies, who at best, it was believed, would only carry on a desultory campaign, offering a sort of holiday for the invaders, have upset the calculations of the Italians by a series of concerted attacks in which, according to accounts sent by correspondents without submission to the censor, the Italians have come off second best.

The Turkish embassy issued a statement claiming that in the fighting the allies gained victory, the Italians losing 300 men killed and 700 wounded.

A belated account on the fight coming by way of Malta, says the Italians have no knowledge of what brought about their defeat. The Moslems, thoroughly understanding each other, prepared for a supreme effort to stagger or destroy the invaders and only by accident did the Italians escape deadly ambushes.

Dispatches received in London from Constantinople describe the Turks as elated over their successes in Tripoli. It is believed here and at other capitals that the determined fighting of the Arabs will lengthen the war.

Correspondents who have returned to London on account of the severity of the censorship express the opinion that the Italian losses through cholera and other diseases will be extremely severe should the campaign last any time. They say the troops are not suitably clothed for the tropical nights and that not the slightest precaution is taken to prevent them drinking polluted water.

EXPRESS COMPANIES TO FIGHT

New State Law Regarding City Deliveries to be Tested in Case at Springfield.

Springfield, Mo., Oct. 28.—A fight on the new law which provides for free delivery of express matter in cities of more than 1,000 population will be made here Monday when the complaint of the city council against the Wells-Fargo and United States express companies is taken up by the state railroad and warehouse commissioners. The express companies have announced that leading officials will be here to make a test case of the law.

In the petition of J. B. Gooch, member of the council, and others, it is alleged that the express companies have illegally established a free delivery zone to the exclusion of other parts of the city. A similar complaint will be heard against the United States Express company October 31 at Greenfield.

NOVINGER MINERS ON STRIKE

Arbitration Agreement Under Which They Were Working Repudiated by Men.

Kirksville, Mo., Oct. 28.—Three hundred miners of the Kansas City Midland Coal company at Novinger, Mo., have struck as the result of fines taken from the wages of some of them by the officers of the company. The men went out two weeks ago and under the terms of arbitration, the mine owners were to get a certain sum from the wages of a few of the miners. When the operators attempted to carry out the terms of the arbitration agreement the workmen struck.

James Mooney, district president of the miners' organization, and W. D. Ryan, representing the coal operators in the district, are expected here to confer about arbitration. Other mines in the Novinger coal field have not been affected.

Ship 50 Cars of Apples.

Keytesville, Mo., Oct. 28.—The largest apple crop in several years is being marketed in Chariton county. Eighteen carloads have been shipped from this town. Fifty carloads already have been shipped from the county. The quality of the fruit is excellent.

More Injunctions in Wichita.

Wichita, Kan., Oct. 28.—Attorney General Dawson who is fighting the liquor element here filed 12 more injunctions on alleged dispensers of liquor and the buildings where they operate, making 69 such proceedings that have been started since October 12.

NOT MUCH TIME FOR REST IN CHICAGO.

Opened With an Address Before Mining Congress and Closed With Big Banquet.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—President Taft was not allowed much time to rest today, and indeed he did not seem to need it. He showed no signs of exhaustion and apparently is enjoying every minute of his stay here. On his arrival last evening he was met by a reception committee and escorted by the First Cavalry, I. N. G., to the First Regiment Armory, where he was welcomed by Mayor Harrison and representatives of the state government. Mr. Taft made a brief talk to the audience that filled the big building, and then was taken to the Blackstone hotel.

At 10:30 o'clock this morning the president addressed the American Mining Congress in Orchestra hall, confining his remarks mainly to conservation and the government's policy in the matter of opening the public lands in Alaska and the western states. Going to the Hotel La Salle, Mr. Taft next was the guest of the Chicago Bar association at an elaborate luncheon. President Edgar B. Tolman was the toastmaster and the speeches were short and snappy. The president's engagement took him to Lake Bluff, where he participated in the dedication of the new Great Lakes naval training station. Admiral Roos was his host there, and one of the incidents was the presentation to the president of a petition asking the executive to use his influence with the Illinois legislature to have it enact a law which will provide a five-mile dry zone about government reservations instead of the mile and an eighth law as it now exists in Illinois.

To wind up the busy day, Mr. Taft will be the guest of honor this evening at the annual banquet of the Chicago Association of Commerce at the Sherman hotel. President Harry A. Wheeler will be toastmaster and Mr. Taft will deliver the chief address.

Tomorrow morning the president will be allowed to rest, but in the afternoon he will be taken for an automobile tour of the parks and boulevards, and then to Quinn chapel to speak to the colored Y. M. C. A. At 8 o'clock he will address the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall. Monday is to be devoted to a visit to the National Dairy show, the laying of the cornerstone of the Hamilton club's new building, and a luncheon.

LIQUOR ENEMIES IN MILWAUKEE

The Women's Christian Temperance Union Holding Annual Convention in "Famous" City.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 28.—The Women's Christian Temperance Union has invaded Milwaukee. Two thousand White Ribboners occupy hotels and boarding houses in the "famous city" and are attending the thirty-eighth annual convention, which opened today. Their first action was to insist that the bar of their convention hotel be closed. H. P. Gilpatrick, the proprietor, took a look at the visiting delegation, headed by a determined lady from Kansas, and complied. A big sign bearing the inscription, "Closed in Honor of the W. C. T. U." decorates Gilpatrick's thirst parlor.

The convention this year is of great importance to those interested in prohibition. The organization will probably adopt measures for a campaign to regain the territory recently lost to prohibition in New England, and for further campaigns against the "demon" in states that are not yet "dry." It is thought by many that a radical departure in the campaign plans of the W. C. T. U. must be adopted in order to increase the organization's effectiveness, and this faction of the delegates is today advocating a deeper study of political conditions in the different states and the methods employed by successful reform movements to push through their candidates.

Officers of the W. C. T. U. and women of national prominence in the prohibition movement have made the journey to Milwaukee and will address the delegates. Mrs. Lillian M. W. Stevens of Portland, Me., president of the W. C. T. U., made the opening address. She was followed by Rev. Mary E. Kuhl, president of the Illinois branch of the organization.

Other prominent speakers will be: Mrs. Ella Brooks, president of the New York branch; Mrs. Florence Richard, a national organizer of Ohio; Mrs. Mary Harris of Georgia; Mrs. Scovell of Minnesota; Mrs. Witchner of Kansas; Mrs. Sparks of New Jersey and Mrs. Russell of Mississippi.

Gas Goes Up at Atchison.

Atchison, Kan., Oct. 28.—The price of gas was raised here from 25 cents to 27 cents a thousand cubic feet. The local company obtains its supply from the Kansas Natural Gas company, and it was in compliance with orders from the Kansas Natural that the rates were increased.

Mexican Cabinet Members Out.

The City of Mexico, Oct. 28.—Three ministers were eliminated from the De la Barra cabinet through the acceptance of their resignations by the chief executive. Their dismissal was a direct outgrowth of the futile campaign against Emiliano Zapata.

STEEL TRUST WILL FIGHT

First Step in Legal Battle to be Taken December 4.

GOVERNMENT CASE COMPLETED

Tobacco and Oil Decisions to Have No Bearing on Fate of Greatest Corporation in the World.

Washington, Oct. 28.—The United States Steel corporation's first step in the legal battle with the government for its existence will be taken Monday, December 4. On that day an array of counsel, including some of the most brilliant legal minds in America, will formally appear before the United States circuit court at Trenton, N. J.

January 2, 1912, the steel corporation is expected to file its answer to the government's sensational charges. In the meantime they may demur to some of the government's allegations, or they may file a bill of exceptions. Either action would delay automatically the actual beginning of the trial. The government expects that none of the formalities of law will be overlooked by its opponents. It is possible, however, that no legal technicalities may be thrown in the way.

Official Washington still is wondering how the preparations for the filing of the bill were conducted with such secrecy. The bill was not set in type in the government printing office, as such petitions usually are, but was printed by the private concern that prints the decisions of the supreme court.

It was intimated at the department of justice that the government considers its case practically complete. Special agents who have worked for the last two years or more still are gathering some loose ends, however.

The procedure will be for Judges Gray, Lanning and Buffington to appoint a master to hear testimony. The master so appointed will take evidence in various parts of the country. It required a year and a half to take the testimony in the Standard Oil case. That was considered fairly quick time. The government expects to do as well with the steel corporation.

When the taking of testimony is finished and both sides have been heard the circuit court will decide the issue. Whichever side loses will appeal, and by the operation of the so-called expediting act the case will jump to the supreme court, where the fate of the greatest corporation in the world will be decided.

Department of Justice officials do not feel that the supreme court decisions in the oil and tobacco cases will decide the steel case. Attorney General Wickensham declared he is convinced more than ever that each case must be settled upon its own merits, and that the oil and tobacco cases cannot fairly be called models for solving the trust question.

VERDICT FOR FATHER OF GIRLS

Ex-City Treasurer of Trinidad Stabbed Married Man for Insult to Daughters.

Trinidad, Col., Oct. 28.—"Justifiable homicide" was the verdict returned by a coroner's jury at the investigation inquiring into the death of J. W. Bundy, a motor driver and a married man, stabbed by Allen Fowler, ex-city treasurer, on one of the principal business streets of Trinidad.

Fowler stabbed Bundy when he met the latter in company with Fowler's two young daughters. The verdict of the jury was based on the testimony given by the two girls that Bundy had suggested to them that they accompany him to a downtown hotel.

Ingersoll Statue is Unveiled.

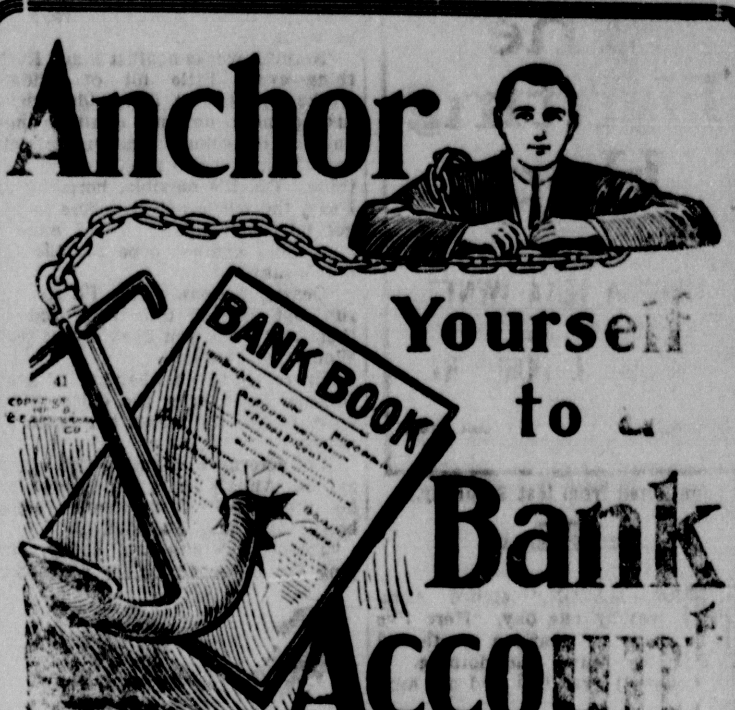

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 28.—A statue of Robert G. Ingersoll was unveiled this afternoon in Glen Oak Park in the presence of a large gathering of his admirers from this and other places. Among the guests was a large party from Chicago. Master Robert G. CHAPTER V.

"THE FATHER OF HER BOYS."

"MR. MASON," sighed Anna wearily one day. "Here I've been for nearly a month and I've found out nothing. I don't believe I ever will find out anything of myself against Mr. Temple."

The housekeeper started and eyed her curiously.

"Even if you don't find out anything, dearie," she said stolidly, "you may be pretty certain that your husband will be set free. Mr. Temple may be indicted now any day, and everybody, all the papers, say the circumstantial evidence is so strong that he must be convicted. He's surely guilty." Mrs. Mason, as all who knew her were aware, once having formed an opinion, held to it.

"I don't want Robert cleared on circumstantial evidence," protested Anna. "That's not what I'm making this fight for. I know what public opinion is. It's fickle; it cries 'Hosannah' on Palm Sunday; it cries 'Crucify' on Good Friday. I know the sway of the press can make or unmake a man. Just now it's making Robert and breaking Mr. Temple, but after the clamor will come doubt. I want the proof of Robert's innocence in my own hands. I don't want any sentimental vindication for the father of my boys."

The father of her boys! Yes, it had come to be just that. Unconsciously she had said it. To keep herself to her duty she had fallen back on that last reserve of a woman's strength, her mother love.

And how hungry she was growing for them, these boys of hers! "Oh, I need them," she exclaimed in a sudden outburst—"I need them! Do you know, without them even my prayers have come to be stricken and pained things. Without them the great scheme of the universe seems to have got grotesquely mixed, irrationally jumbled. With a child in her arms a woman feels always less like a speck of sand under the eye of the Infinite, the incomprehensible. It's the unbreakable link of the Human Son binding us to the feet of God, I suppose." Anna leaned forward over her machine and buried her head in her arms.

A light was dawning upon Mrs. Mason—a light which she dreaded. She came over and stroked the buried head.

"What beautiful hair you have, child!" she said faintly, not knowing what else to say.

"Uh-huh!" murmured the young woman whimsically. "It's pleasant to feel soft and smooth, isn't it, yet offering a slight resistance to stroking? It's modern, independent hair."

This mood would never do. The prim New Englander saw it. "I say, Anna, what you need is to have a little visit with your children. Mr. Temple will excuse you for a day, I know. You can run out to see them, and—"

"Oh, but I can't—I can't, you see," cried Anna in an extremity of desire and duty. "A day? Why, just in that very day the evidence I'm seeking might come—a letter, a telegram, a telephone message. Look here, Mrs. Mason!" Opening a drawer of her desk, she took out a handkerchief. One corner of it was tied in a hard knot over many tiny scraps of paper.

"As Mr. Temple was leaving the room just before you came in he tore up this letter and threw it in the wastebasket, you understand? You ask me often why I am so white in the mornings when I come down to breakfast. Well, it's because I haven't slept. It's because I've been passing the night trying to piece together just such scraps as these. Always—always with no result."

"Nothing works against him. Everything—every little bit of evidence works for him. A little side light on his splendid fighting qualities here; another on some unknown patrician act of kindness to some fellow being there. Oh, it's horrible, horrible! As I say, the whole of life seems to have got mixed—jumbled. Yet I must go on hoping against hope for the children's sake."

"Dearie, I know what I'll do. I'll run out myself tomorrow and see them and fetch you back direct word. Would you like it?"

For reply, in an abandon of gratefulness, Anna drew the elder woman down to her and kissed her again and again.

That afternoon, taking a stroll in the garden, Anna's heart felt lighter, and her dimples stirred incipiently, remembering Mrs. Mason's promise.

"Tomorrow," she said softly, stopping for a second before a rosebush

TOGETHER THEY EXTRACTED THE SKIRT, and leaning her cheek down to one of the Gloire de Dijon triumphs. "Oh, tomorrow, please come quickly!"

A thorn caught her skirt as she was in the act of moving on.

"May I help?" asked Burton Temple, advancing. Unknown to her he had been reading in the little vine covered pagoda opposite, Cato at his feet.

Together they extracted the skirt, a fragile texture transparent with lace, a faint perfume in it. He noticed that she wore a porte bonheur on her arm with a turquoise in it. It made the skin look white, or the skin made it look blue. The petty common service broke the spell of formality which usually existed between them in the library.

"Are you going farther down the path? May I walk with you?" he asked, and, having received the assent of her head and a nonchalant "If you wish," he began:

"Do you know what I was thinking about, Miss Dale, as I sat there in the pagoda? I was wondering where I had met you before. Since the very first day you came I have often wondered that. I have seen you before—oh, no, there is no doubt about it—but where I can't recall."

"In some other incarnation, I dare say," laughed she. "Was it when we were swinging from trees or not so long ago as that? Could it?—yes, she would tempt the fates and be downright courageous—"could it have been in the days when I was in the Exchange building. One meets so many—"

"The Exchange building? Ah, precisely! I recall it all now, and how I used to find myself unwittingly looking for you after that first day. But I was called south, and when I came back you had vanished." He spoke reminiscently.

"The first day? I don't quite understand," queried she.

"I was coming down in the elevator, harried to death, my mind in a frightful state of turmoil. I found you watching me from some crowded corner, and I looked directly into your eyes." He studied her now with a smile serious and tender. "I looked, and it was like bathing one's face in a pool of spring water after a hot journey," he ended simply.

It came back with such unmistakable vividness to Anna that she spoke spontaneously:

"You did look worried."

"Oh, you remember, too?" he cried. "I can't tell you how glad that makes me. I couldn't get you out of my mind somehow. You see, I never did get you out of my mind. Some faces stay with us. Yours stayed."

The woman beside him had become very grave, feeling the beat of her pulse quicken with the distant surge of a strange joy, a joy indistinct as the tremor of an unseen sun, yet all pervasive. Realizing her danger, deftly she veered her mood.

"Yes, I passed our old elevator boy on the street a few months ago," she remarked casually, stooping to pat the mastiff's head. "I remembered his face, too, though it had been over a decade since I saw him."

The man's face was rueful as he noted appreciation of her tactics.

Below them was the broad expanse of the Hudson, scintillating as a sapphire in the glow of the summer after-noon. A yachting party steaming up river waved hats and handkerchiefs at them in pure good fellowship. It seemed good to be alive. Temple pulled two chairs under the shade of the trees, and they sat down. In the distance the cliffs of the Palisades rose and beckoned alluringly.

"Do you know what I used to call them, those cliffs?" said he, seeing his companion's eyes upon them. "My enchanted palace. When I was a child the palace of enchantment meant the future, the mysterious, ineffable future when I should be grown up, when I should be a man, when the world would be my garden, the world and life and all their riches mine to explore, to adventure in. And, oh, the people by whom the world and the future were inhabited, the cavaliering knights, the lovely princesses! Love and glory and all manner of romance. I had them for the wishing. Did you ever have such an enchanted palace, Miss Dale?" asked he whimsically.

"Yes," acquiesced she softly, falling in with his mood, the sympathetic bond which always asserted itself when she was not on guard, drawing her once again. "Oh, yes; I, too, had my enchanted palace, a many pin-nacled palace built of gold and silver, ivory, alabaster and mother of pearl; the fountains in its courts ran with perfumed waters." Her voice trailed off dreamily, and Temple thrilled with the music of it. "And its pleasure was an orchard of pomegranates. One had no need to spare one's colors, you know." She turned to him with an adorable smile.

"I know." He was at one with her now, responding intuitively to the play of her emotions. "And the stars left their courses to fight for you, and the winds of heaven vied with each other to prosper your galleons—wasn't it like that?" He looked at her; she was scarcely listening; she was watching the sunlight catching on the tops of the Palisades. It was just as well; he was safer in his inspection of her so.

"Uh-huh! Like that," she said, her ears mechanically following his words. "I dare say," she went on musingly, "it must be that we pass the enchanted palace while we are asleep. Surely, at first, it is before us—we can see it glistening in the distance, like the peaks yonder. We shall reach it tomorrow, next month, next year. And then one morning we wake up and—and it is behind us. We've passed it, and we can't turn back. We must go on." Her voice ended in a little half sob.

The sight of a tear trembling on her lashes cost Burton Temple a hundred conflicts with himself. He felt a sudden warmth behind his eyes and in his throat. All he did, however, was to look big, hold his tongue and envy the dead their enforced responsibility.

"I'm not often agitated," said Anna, rising, with an odd, starchy smile, "and you must pardon me that display of oversentiment." But before he could have spoken: "I must really go in now. I've promised Mrs. Mason to play a game of pachi, or cribbage, or something," she faltered. So Temple, elaborately commiserating, escorted her up the red gravel path.

Anna was growing excessively uneasy. For quite two hours now she'd been anxiously expecting Mrs. Mason's return from Westfield. What could be the matter? At the very least it must be the measles. Finally, however, her elder friend came in smilingly, disarming all fears.

"And how's the new nurse getting on with them? Does she make Robbie wear his rubbers on wet days? Is his cold quite gone? Is Harold's finger well again? Have they hid that horrid penknife?" Anna was untying Mrs. Mason's veil and pouring out her questions in a torrent.

Mrs. Mason assured her that the boys were both well and happy, that the new nurse was doing beautifully and that, except for a few hours when the rascals had her locked in the chicken house, she was having a fine time.

"Oh, she won't mind an inconsequential thing like the chicken house," laughed Anna, handing Mrs. Mason her veil plus, "when once she's used to those boys. They locked their mother in one day, and I had to spank them, poor little dears. Oh, but I'm sick with longing for them—sick!"

"I know, dearie," soothed Mrs. Mason, patting her on the back. "But I've something else to tell you. You couldn't guess why I was so late coming back? No? Well, I've been up to see Robert."

"You have?" Anna started never so slightly. "Is—he well? Is he keeping up? What did he think about my being here?"

"Oh, he's well, and he's keeping up. They're all very good to him. They feel he is up there through a miscarriage of justice. They treat him kindly. They've made him what they call a 'trustee.'"

Anna was listening with strained attention.

"You explained to him, didn't you, Mrs. Mason? You made it clear just why I left home? You made him understand that I am in a position here to find out the truth that will convict the man who has done this thing?"

Mrs. Mason plucked several imaginary threads off her skirts to hide her confusion.

"At first, you know," went on Anna, "I thought it best not to let him know about my having left home. I knew he would worry about the boys. But a few days ago I managed to get him word. I felt the time had come. And now, what does he say?"

Mrs. Mason still faltered. Her conscience would not permit her to tell less than the whole truth; nevertheless, she longed for some fashion in which to put it gently.

"Well, he said, dear—he turned white and said he didn't want you to remain in this house. Said it didn't look quite right; that he'd rather have you home with the children than here in Temple's house."

Anna smiled indulgently. "Poor boy! He's afraid the work will prove too hard for me. It won't. I'll fasten the crime yet, though it may break my heart." The final words were almost choked. She walked across to the window and stood staring out at the grim prison there. It was a little trick she had learned whenever she wished to steel herself in the fight she had undertaken. Presently she turned back—a dumb, pathetic perplexity in each gray eye.

"Oh, if I could get back to the condition in which I entered this house—the clear air where there are no obscurities, no mysteries!"

She spoke half to herself, but the words fell like little whips on Mrs. Mason's ears.

"What obscurities, what mysteries are you talking of?" she said sternly. "I don't understand."

"No more do I—no more do I!" Anna twisted and untwisted her hands in silence for a moment. "Only this I know," she said at last. "When I came here I could harden my heart against the man with whom I had come to wage war. I could continually remember his responsibility for Robert's imprisonment. Oh, I could fight fairly and squarely. But now—" "It's strange," she went on reflectively—"strange. Now I always have to bring myself up with a deliberate effort. I have to think to hate him—I don't hate him intuitively any more. There's something about him"—her voice softened oddly—"I can't describe it. He's strong, somehow. He's big and deep and earnest and illimitably strong. He draws one."

Osler isn't the only man who turns down old age. In the business world the "young man" is always the one who picks the plums. It is an age of "new thought," "new talent," etc., and the old man is passed by in the race.

One of the first signs of coming age is the appearance of gray hairs. When you see them, act promptly. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy will correct this sign, which so often deceives people into thinking that age is really upon them. It is a well known fact that Sage and Sulphur will darken the hair. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur combines these old-time remedies with other agents, which remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize the druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

Don't look old before your time. Get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and see what an improvement it will make in the appearance of your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special agents, Koch Pharmacy.

By official record the men serving in the Union army and navy during the civil war numbered 2,213,265. There are now on the pension rolls 529,884 of this number. The deaths among them last year were 35,243. The average age of the survivors at present is 70 years.

Secretary Meyer says the United States spends ten million dollars a month on its navy. This has been the rate for the past five years, thus aggregating the enormous sum of $600,000,000.

Is the World Growing Better?

Many things go to prove that it is. The way thousands are trying to help others is proof. Among them is Mrs. W. W. Gould of Pittsfield, N. H. Finding good health by taking Electric Bitters, she now advises other sufferers, everywhere, to take them. "For years I suffered with stomach and kidney trouble," she writes. "Every medicine I used failed till I took Electric Bitters. But this great remedy helped me wonderfully." They'll help any woman. They're the best tonic and finest liver and kidney remedy that's made. Try them. You'll see. 50c at the Orear-Henry Drug Co.

A pneumatic rug or "shake-down" has been invented for the convenience of motorists who must lie on their backs beneath their cars while making repairs.

In Asia Minor blue is worn as a sign of mourning, in Turkey violet, in Persia brown and in China white.

During the decade from 1900 to 1910 it is estimated that 210,000 Greeks emigrated to this country.

It's Equal Don't Exist.

No one has ever made a salve, ointment or balm to compare with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the one perfect healer of cuts, corns, ulcers, bruises, sores, scalds, boils, ulcers, eczema, salt rheum. For sore eyes, cold sores, chapped hands or sprains it's supreme. Unrivaled for piles. Try it. Only 25c at the Orear-Henry Drug company.

LIVED ON RAW EGGS

Mr. Richard's Experience With Different Diets. Peaches and Buttermilk for Three Years.

Cecilton, Md.—Mr. George Richards, of this place, during the past 12 years, has probably tried more different diets than the average person would ever use in a lifetime.

What he has to say about his experiments, must therefore be highly interesting to anyone suffering from indigestion or stomach troubles of any kind.

He says: "For more than 12 years, I suffered with stomach troubles, and paid hundreds of dollars for doctor bills and medicines. I was also operated on for piles."

I lived on dried peaches and buttermilk for nearly three years. The only thing that would not give me pain was raw eggs. I was a physical wreck. I could not sleep, and was as near crazy as a man could well be.

I must say that after taking two 25-cent packages of Thedford's Black-Draught, it did me more good than all I ever spent for other medicines.

I have been working daily on the farm ever since, and I am as hard as iron. This purely vegetable remedy has been in successful use for more than 70 years. Try it. But be sure that it's "Thedford's."

TIED FOR FIRST PLACE.

Dodgers Crawled Up On Tigers by Winning Close Game.

Standing of Teams.

By defeating the Tigers Friday night 13 to 11, the Dodgers moved up to share first place with the Tigers. The Tigers played a very good game in the absence of Mitchell, and there is little doubt that they would have won handily with their captain in the line-up. The twenty-four minutes of play resulted in a tie score, 11 to 11, and after play had been resumed Captain McGrew of the Dodgers shot a goal and the game was decided. Score, 13 to 11. This is the second tie game the Tigers have dropped since the captain's injury and retirement from the game, and all members of the team have decided that the "jinx" is following them for true.

The Dwarfs-Giants game, which was postponed from Friday night, will be played off Tuesday night. The line-up of the Dodger-Tiger game is:

Dodgers—McGrew and Denny, forwards; H. Seymour, center; Parman and Mutz, guards.

Tigers—Holmes and Carpenter, forwards; R. Miller, center; Scott and Nixon, guards.

Summary of score—Field goals, Carpenter 2, Holmes 2, Denny 2, McGrew 1. Free throws, Carpenter 2, Denny 3, Seymour 4.

One point was awarded the Tigers.

High School Notes.

Miss Hilda Lahr, a high school student and graduate of the Conservatory of Music, gave three piano solos during the assembly hour on Wednesday. The rendition of the pieces was excellent, and they were well received by the students. The pieces were "Polish Dance," by Shorwenka; "Il Trovatore," by Dorn; and "Drifting Leaves," by Matthews.

The advanced seniors have invited the spring seniors to be their guests at a Halloween party, which will be given next Monday evening. Just what the hosts and hostesses have in store for the guests is as yet a secret. But it is understood that the guests are to be on their best behavior and are not to be surprised at anything that may happen to them.

Superintendent Hawkins went to Columbia Friday evening to spend the week end with his family, who reside there.

Mrs. A. R. Perrin and Mrs. Lottie Oman, accompanied by their guest, Mrs. E. O. Goldsmith of Vicksburg, Mich., were visitors in the domestic science department this week.

A picnic plan by one of the sophomore classes for Saturday was postponed till a later date.

REPORT READY SOON

FINDING OF ENGINEERS WILL BE MADE PUBLIC SHORTLY.

MGR. STREET WENT HOME

Not Allowed to Test Standpipe and Water Pressure—Much Interest in the Coming Reports.

The report of Hiram Phillips of St. Louis and Burns & McDonald of Kansas City as to the present value of the city water company plant and as to the cost of building a new one here will be ready for the public in about two weeks, so one member of the public works board said Saturday morning. In the report will be found everything that has any bearing on the water question.

After the report is made, then definite action can be taken by the board as to either buying the old plant, if the price is reasonable, or erecting a new one.

The work, it is said, is progressing smoothly, though it is known that Manager Street did not remain to go into the details fully with the engineers as it was understood he would. It is said the water company expected access to the reports which the board of public works was unwilling to grant, and that in view of this disagreement Mr. Street withdrew and declined to grant the engineers such special favors as cutting into the mains, testing the water pressure for fire, etc. However, Mr. Street of the water company insists that he does not expect to ask any more for the water works than they are really worth. Whether his ideas on this point agree with the engineers will be disclosed when their reports are in and the views of both sides then to be expressed will make mighty interesting reading to the people of Maryville.

The Woodson Smith Hat company sued for $1,800. The $132.17 was for interest. This is the seventh suit of sixteen brought by the hat company against fire insurance companies. Six of them have been won. The rest of the suits will be tried immediately.—Kansas City Star.

A PERSONAL WORD.

The evening service of the First Methodist Episcopal church will be dispensed with tomorrow evening in honor of Dr. Luce, who closes his pastorate with the First Presbyterian church. The pastor of this church takes this opportunity to speak a word of appreciation of Dr. Luce, whom he has learned to know intimately and to love very much; a scholarly, cultured, Christian gentleman, whose life is a benediction to every one whom it touches and to every community in which it is lived. His good cheer is as refreshing as a cool breeze on a hot August day.

For many years to come there will be many in this city who can say as Tennyson said of his friend Hallam:

Whatever way my days decline,
I felt and feel, though left alone,
His being working in my own,
The footsteps of his life in mine.

This pastor thanks God for the fellowship of this princely man, and breathes at this moment a sincere and earnest prayer that the good Father of us all may have Dr. Luce and his good wife and family in His holy keeping, and in His own good time bring them and us into sweet fellowship in the church above, which is without fault before the throne of God.

MAKE UP LIFE.

Details and routine make up life and most of life's occupations. The man or woman who fails to recognize that often comes to grief. But at the same time routine is something that has to be guarded against, to avoid becoming its victim. In some professions and trades it is very hard to keep from this. In school teaching it is especially so. A former superintendent of education says that a majority of school teachers succumb to the mere routine level within three or four years, and from that time on simply are feeding material to a machine. It is pleasantest to think that is overdrawn. But it nevertheless serves to remind us of the disastrous consequences of a teacher gone to seed, so to speak. The poor pupil pays the penalty. In the end the community, of which this pupil one day becomes an integral part and to which he is supposed to contribute something vital, pays the penalty.

The person who finds contentment in his work for work's sake, that is for the sake of the good the work can be made to produce, is not likely to lapse into this state of desuetude. And more than that, one should attempt, no matter what his occupation may be, to master it and keep on growing in it and widening his sphere of influence and in time his job will get so big that he will not have time to grow dull or routine in doing it.

MOTORISTS TRY NEW STATE ROAD

Tourists Meet Enthusiastic Reception Everywhere.

GOVERNOR SPOKE AT LEXINGTON

Glasgow, Mo., Oct. 28.—Missouri's cross-state highway is no longer a state highway in name only. The motorists from Kansas City are resting in Glasgow, Boonville and Fayette after an all day's trip along flaglined roads, every foot of which had been graded and dragged. Hills which had been difficult for the motorists to climb when the inspection party first went over the route last summer had been lowered, concrete culverts had replaced ramshackle wooden structures.

But more important than the evidence of works already done was the spirit displayed by the farmers. It was distinctly a farmers' celebration, although each large town along the route had prepared a celebration for the good roads tourists. It was from the farmers that came the pledge that a highway would be built. Farm after farm was passed with the farmer not in his fields but on the road with his teams. The farmer's wife and his children were at the gate waving a flag in welcome.

The Kansas City motorists will unite at Rocheport, from where they will go to Columbia to celebrate with a similar delegation of motorists from St. Louis the formal dedication of the cross-state highway. But the farmers have dedicated it by the renewed pledge that the good roads work would continue until the highway was a permanent rock road all the way from Kansas City to St. Louis.

The courthouse was packed at Lexington, where Gov. Hadley gave a short address on good roads. The overflow crowd was entertained by Mayor Brown of Kansas City, who first led the band and then gave a talk on the importance of good roads. At Marshall, after another dinner, Gov. Hadley spoke from the courthouse steps.

The only portion of the cross-state highway not yet definitely decided upon is the river crossing. Glasgow has been chosen tentatively. Boonville wants the route to cross there.

Gov. Hadley, who had visited Glasgow before, went to Boonville. The remainder of the motor cars were equally divided between the two towns. At Glasgow the merchants had purchased a new ferry boat, which took the cars across the river in three minutes.

Congressman W. P. Borland was the chief speaker at Glasgow. Gov. Hadley spoke at Boonville and then hurried over to Fayette, where he spoke again before a large crowd on good roads.

State Takes all the Best Land in Rosebud Lottery for School Purposes.

Gregory, S. D., Oct. 28.—Something of a sensation in connection with the Rosebud land lottery developed here when it was disclosed that 41 sections of school land have been taken by the Indian allotments.

This means that 41 sections of the best land in Mellette county will be selected by the state as Indian school lands before the settlers have a chance to file. Inasmuch as only about 30 sections are classified by the appraisers as A-1 agricultural land, it looks very much as though none of the best of the land will pass into the possession of the settlers at this time.

Jefferson City, Oct. 28.—Judge William H. Wallace of Kansas City appeared before the supreme court in support of the injunction process of putting "blind tigers" out of business in local option counties. He declared the law is not sufficient.

Judge Wallace appeared in a case originating at Keytesville in Chariton county. There the prosecuting attorney, Roy Rucker, secured an injunction in the circuit court against W. and Aubrey Thrash and R. P. Carr to restrain them from running a restaurant which he alleged to be a "blind tiger." A temporary injunction was issued.

Ortle McManigal Testify.

Indianapolis, Oct. 28.—That Ortle E. McManigal would be subpoenaed to appear before the federal grand jury in this district early in November to testify in its investigation of the so-called McNamara dynamiting cases was reported among persons in touch with the developments in the inquiry.

TURKEY NOT SO EASY FOR ITALY

Turks Found to be Better Prepared Than Had Been Expected.

ITALIANS LOSE MANY BATTLES

Arabs Assisting Turks are Expected to Prolong War—Cholera Threatens Invaders.

London, Oct. 28.—From uncensored dispatches from Tripoli reaching England by way of Malta, which in part are confirmed by censored dispatches reaching Rome, it is apparent that Italy's campaign in Tripoli already has cost more lives than the government anticipated, while the financial outlay will greatly exceed the estimates.

The Turks with their Arab allies, who at best, it was believed, would only carry on a desultory campaign, offering a sort of holiday for the invaders, have upset the calculations of the Italians by a series of concerted attacks in which, according to accounts sent by correspondents without submission to the censor, the Italians have come off second best.

The Turkish embassy issued a statement claiming that in the fighting the allies gained victory, the Italians losing 300 men killed and 700 wounded.

A belated account on the fight coming by way of Malta, says the Italians have no knowledge of what brought about their defeat. The Moslems, thoroughly understanding each other, prepared for a supreme effort to stagger or destroy the invaders and only by accident did the Italians escape deadly ambushes.

Dispatches received in London from Constantinople describe the Turks as elated over their successes in Tripoli. It is believed here and at other capitals that the determined fighting of the Arabs will lengthen the war.

Correspondents who have returned to London on account of the severity of the censorship express the opinion that the Italian losses through cholera and other diseases will be extremely severe should the campaign last any time. They say the troops are not suitably clothed for the tropical nights and that not the slightest precaution is taken to prevent them drinking polluted water.

EXPRESS COMPANIES TO FIGHT

New State Law Regarding City Deliveries to be Tested in Case at Springfield.

Springfield, Mo., Oct. 28.—A fight on the new law which provides for free delivery of express matter in cities of more than 1,000 population will be made here Monday when the complaint of the city council against the Wells-Fargo and United States express companies is taken up by the state railroad and warehouse commissioners. The express companies have announced that leading officials will be here to make a test case of the law.

In the petition of J. B. Gooch, member of the council, and others, it is alleged that the express companies have illegally established a free delivery zone to the exclusion of other parts of the city. A similar complaint will be heard against the United States Express company October 31 at Greenfield.

NOVINGER MINERS ON STRIKE

Arbitration Agreement Under Which They Were Working Repudiated by Men.

Kirkville, Mo., Oct. 28.—Three hundred miners of the Kansas City Midland Coal company at Novinger, Mo., have struck as the result of fines taken from the wages of some of them by the officers of the company. The men went out two weeks ago and under the terms of arbitration, the mine owners were to get a certain sum from the wages of a few of the miners. When the operators attempted to carry out the terms of the arbitration agreement the workmen struck.

James Mooney, district president of the miners' organization, and W. D. Ryan, representing the coal operators in the district, are expected here to confer about arbitration. Other mines in the Novinger coal field have not been affected.

Ship 50 Cars of Apples.

Keytesville, Mo., Oct. 28.—The largest apple crop in several years is being marketed in Chariton county. Eighteen carloads have been shipped from this town. Fifty carloads already have been shipped from the county. The quality of the fruit is excellent.

More Injunctions in Wichita.

Wichita, Kan., Oct. 28.—Attorney General Dawson who is fighting the liquor element here filed 12 more injunctions on alleged dispensers of liquor and the buildings where they operate, making 59 such proceedings that have been started since October 12.

NOT MUCH TIME FOR REST IN CHICAGO.

Opened With an Address Before Mining Congress and Closed With Big Banquet.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—President Taft was not allowed much time to rest today, and indeed he did not seem to need it. He showed no signs of exhaustion and apparently is enjoying every minute of his stay here. On his arrival last evening he was met by a reception committee and escorted by the First Cavalry, I. N. G., to the First Regiment Armory, where he was welcomed by Mayor Harrison and representatives of the state government. Mr. Taft made a brief talk to the audience that filled the big building, and then was taken to the Blackstone hotel.

At 10:30 o'clock this morning the president addressed the American Mining Congress in Orchestra hall, confining his remarks mainly to conservation and the government's policy in the matter of opening the public lands in Alaska and the western states. Going to the Hotel La Salle, Mr. Taft next was the guest of the Chicago Bar association at an elaborate luncheon. President Edgar B. Tolman was the toastmaster and the speeches were short and snappy. The president's engagement took him to Lake Bluff, where he participated in the dedication of the new Great Lakes naval training station. Admiral Roos was his host there, and one of the incidents was the presentation to the president of a petition asking the executive to use his influence with the Illinois legislature to have it enact a law which will provide a five-mile dry zone about government reservations instead of the mile and an eighth law as it now exists in Illinois.

To wind up the busy day, Mr. Taft will be the guest of honor this evening at the annual banquet of the Chicago Association of Commerce at the Sherman hotel. President Harry A. Wheeler will be toastmaster and Mr. Taft will deliver the chief address.

Tomorrow morning the president will be allowed to rest, but in the afternoon he will be taken for an automobile tour of the parks and boulevards, and then to Quinn chapel to speak to the colored Y. M. C. A. At 8 o'clock he will address the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall. Monday is to be devoted to a visit to the National Dairy show, the laying of the cornerstone of the Hamilton club's new building, and a luncheon.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union Holding Annual Convention in "Famous" City.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 28.—The Women's Christian Temperance Union has invaded Milwaukee. Two thousand White Ribboners occupy hotels and boarding houses in the "famous city" and are attending the thirty-eighth annual convention, which opened today. Their first action was to insist that the bar of their convention hotel be closed. H. P. Gilpatrick, the proprietor, took a look at the visiting delegation, headed by a determined lady from Kansas, and complied. A big sign bearing the inscription, "Closed in Honor of the W. C. T. U." decorates Gilpatrick's thirst parlor.

The convention this year is of great importance to those interested in prohibition. The organization will probably adopt measures for a campaign to regain the territory recently lost to prohibition in New England, and for further campaigns against the "demon" in states that are not yet "dry." It is thought by many that a radical departure in the campaign plans of the W. C. T. U. must be adopted in order to increase the organization's effectiveness, and this faction of the delegates is today advocating a deeper study of political conditions in the different states and the methods employed by successful reform movements to push through their candidates.

Officers of the W. C. T. U. and women of national prominence in the prohibition movement have made the journey to Milwaukee and will address the delegates. Mrs. Lillian M. W. Stevens of Portland, Me., president of the W. C. T. U., made the opening address. She was followed by Rev. Mary E. Kuhl, president of the Illinois branch of the organization.

Other prominent speakers will be: Mrs. Ella Brooks, president of the New York branch; Mrs. Florence Richard, a national organizer of Ohio; Mrs. Mary Harris of Georgia; Mrs. Scroell of Minnesota; Mrs. Witchner of Kansas; Mrs. Sparks of New Jersey and Mrs. Russell of Mississippi.

Gas Goes Up at Atchison.

Atchison, Kan., Oct. 28.—The price of gas was raised here from 25 cents to 27 cents a thousand cubic feet. The local company obtains its supply from the Kansas Natural Gas company, and it was in compliance with orders from the Kansas Natural that the rates were increased.

Mexican Cabinet Members Out.

The City of Mexico, Oct. 28.—Three ministers were eliminated from the De la Barra cabinet through the acceptance of their resignations by the chief executive. Their dismissal was a direct outgrowth of the futile campaign against Emiliano Zapata.

STEEL TRUST WILL FIGHT

First Step in Legal Battle to be Taken December 4.

GOVERNMENT CASE COMPLETED

Tobacco and Oil Decisions to Have No Bearing on Fate of Greatest Corporation in the World.

Washington, Oct. 28.—The United States Steel corporation's first step in the legal battle with the government for its existence will be taken Monday, December 4. On that day an array of counsel, including some of the most brilliant legal minds in America, will formally appear before the United States circuit court at Trenton, N. J.

January 2, 1912, the steel corporation is expected to file its answer to the government's sensational charges.

In the meantime they may demur to some of the government's allegations, or they may file a bill of exceptions. Either action would delay automatically the actual beginning of the trial. The government expects that none of the formalities of law will be overlooked by its opponents. It is possible, however, that no legal technicalities may be thrown in the way.

Official Washington still is wondering how the preparations for the filing of the bill were conducted with such secrecy. The bill was not set in type in the government printing office, as such petitions usually are, but was printed by the private concern that prints the decisions of the supreme court.

It was intimated at the department of justice that the government considers its case practically complete. Special agents who have worked for the last two years or more still are gathering some loose ends, however.

The procedure will be for Judges Gray, Lanning and Bullington to appoint a master to hear testimony. The master so appointed will take evidence in various parts of the country. It required a year and a half to take the testimony in the Standard Oil case. That was considered fairly quick time. The government expects to do as well with the steel corporation.

When the taking of testimony is finished and both sides have been heard the circuit court will decide the issue. Whichever side loses will appeal, and by the operation of the so-called expediting act the case will jump to the supreme court, where the fate of the greatest corporation in the world will be decided.

Department of Justice officials do not feel that the supreme court decisions in the oil and tobacco cases will decide the steel case. Attorney General Wickersham declared he is convinced more than ever that each case must be settled upon its own merits, and that the oil and tobacco cases cannot fairly be called models for solving the trust question.

Ex-City Treasurer of Trinidad Stabbed Married Man for Insult to Daughters.

Trinidad, Col., Oct. 28.—"Justifiable homicide" was the verdict returned by a coroner's jury at the investigation inquiring into the death of J. W. Bundy, a motor driver and a married man, stabbed by Allen Fowler, ex-city treasurer, on one of the principal business streets of Trinidad.

Fowler stabbed Bundy when he met the latter in company with Fowler's two young daughters. The verdict of the jury was based on the testimony given by the two girls that Bundy had suggested to them that they accompany him to a downtown hotel.

Ingersoll Statue is Unveiled.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 28.—A statue of Robert G. Ingersoll was unveiled this afternoon in Glen Oak Park in the presence of a large gathering of his admirers from this and other places. Among the guests was a large party from Chicago. Master Robert G. Ingersoll Brown unveiled the statue, the oration was delivered by Charles Frederick Adams and there were short addresses by Henry George, Jr., and others.

Liston of Edmond, Ok., secretary; E. I. Williams of Rush Springs, Ok., treasurer. At the closing session in this city a resolution asking for a referendum to make the game laws more stringent was passed by the association.

CHAPTER V.

"THE FATHER OF HER BOYS."

"MR. MASON," sighed Anna wearily one day. "Here I've been for nearly a month and I've found out nothing. I don't believe I ever will find out anything of myself against Mr. Temple." The housekeeper started and eyed her curiously.

"Even if you don't find out anything, dearie," she said stolidly, "you may be pretty certain that your husband will be set free. Mr. Temple may be indicted now any day, and everybody, all the papers, say the circumstantial evidence is so strong that he must be convicted. He's surely guilty." Mrs. Mason, as all who knew her were aware, once having formed an opinion, held to it.

"I don't want Robert cleared on circumstantial evidence," protested Anna. "That's not what I'm making this fight for. I know what public opinion is. It's fickle; it cries 'Hosannah' on Palm Sunday; it cries 'Crucify' on Good Friday. I know the sway of the press can make or unmake a man. Just now it's making Robert and breaking Mr. Temple, but after the clamor will come doubt. I want the proof of Robert's innocence in my own hands. I don't want any sentimental vindication for the father of my boys."

The father of her boys! Yes, it had come to be just that. Unconsciously she had said it. To keep herself to her duty she had fallen back on that last reserve of a woman's strength, her mother love.

And how hungry she was growing for them, these boys of hers! "Oh, I need them," she exclaimed in a sudden outburst—"I need them! Do you know, without them even my prayers have come to be stricken and pained things. Without them the great scheme of the universe seems to have got grotesquely mixed, irrationally jumbled. With a child in her arms a woman feels always less like a speck of sand under the eye of the Infinite, the incomprehensible. It's the unbreakable link of the Human Son binding us to the feet of God, I suppose." Anna leaned forward over her machine and buried her head in her arms.

A light was dawning upon Mrs. Mason—a light which she dreaded. She came over and stroked the buried head.

"What beautiful hair you have, child!" she said faintly, not knowing what else to say.

"Uh-huh!" murmured the young woman whimsically. "It's pleasant to feel soft and smooth, isn't it, yet offering a slight resistance to stroking? It's modern, independent hair."

"This mood would never do. The prim New Englander saw it. 'I say, Anna, what you need is to have a little visit with your children. Mr. Temple will excuse you for a day, I know. You can run out to see them, and—'"

"Oh, but I can't—I can't, you see," cried Anna in an extremity of desire and duty. "A day? Why, just in that very day the evidence I'm seeking might come—a letter, a telegram, a telephone message. Look here, Mrs. Mason!" Opening a drawer of her desk, she took out a handkerchief. One corner of it was tied in a hard knot over many tiny scraps of paper.

"As Mr. Temple was leaving the room just before you came in he tore up this letter and threw it in the wastebasket, you understand? You ask me often why I am so white in the mornings when I come down to breakfast. Well, it's because I haven't slept. It's because I've been passing the night trying to piece together just such scraps as these. Always—always with no result."

"Nothing works against him. Everything—every little bit of evidence works for him. A little side light on his splendid fighting qualities here; another on some unknown patrician act of kindness to some fellow being there. Oh, it's horrible, horrible! As I say, the whole of life seems to have got mixed—jumbled. Yet I must go on hoping against hope for the children's sake."

"Dearie, I know what I'll do. I'll run out myself tomorrow and see them and fetch you back direct word. Would you like it?"

For reply, in an abandon of gratefulness, Anna drew the elder woman down to her and kissed her again and again.

That afternoon, taking a stroll in the garden, Anna's heart felt lighter, and her dimples stirred incipiently, remembering Mrs. Mason's promise.

"Tomorrow," she said softly, stopping for a second before a rosebush

TOGETHER THEY EXTRACTED THE SKIRT and leaning her cheek down to one of the Gloire de Dijon triumphs. "Oh, tomorrow, please come quickly!"

A thorn caught her skirt as she was in the act of moving on.

"May I help?" asked Burton Temple, advancing. Unknown to her he had been reading in the little vine covered pagoda opposite, Cato at his feet.

Together they extracted the skirt, a fragile texture transparent with lace, a faint perfume in it. He noticed that she wore a porte bonheur on her arm with a turquoise in it. It made the skin look white, or the skin made it look blue. The petty common service broke the spell of formality which usually existed between them in the library.

"Are you going farther down the path? May I walk with you?" he asked, and, having received the assent of her head and a nonchalant "If you wish," he began:

"Do you know what I was thinking about, Miss Dale, as I sat there in the pagoda? I was wondering where I had met you before. Since the very first day you came I have often wondered that. I have seen you before—oh, no, there is no doubt about it—but where I can't recall."

"In some other incarnation, I dare say," laughed she. "Was it when we were swinging from trees or not so long ago as that? Could it?—yes, she would tempt the fates and be downright courageous—"could it have been in the days when I was in the Exchange building. One meets so many—"

"The Exchange building? Ah, precisely! I recall it all now, and how I used to find myself unwittingly looking for you after that first day. But I was called south, and when I came back you had vanished." He spoke reminiscently.

"The first day? I don't quite understand," queried she.

"I was coming down in the elevator, hurried to death, my mind in a frightful state of turmoil. I found you watching me from some crowded corner, and I looked directly into your eyes." He studied her now with a smile serious and tender. "I looked, and it was like bathing one's face in a pool of spring water after a hot journey," he ended simply.

It came back with such unmistakable vividness to Anna that she spoke spontaneously:

"You did look worried."

"Oh, you remember, too?" he cried. "I can't tell you how glad that makes me. I couldn't get you out of my mind somehow. You see, I never did get you out of my mind. Some faces stay with us. Yours stayed."

The woman beside him had become very grave, feeling the beat of her pulse quicken with the distant surge of a strange joy, a joy indistinct as the tremor of an unrisen sun, yet all pervasive. Realizing her danger, deftly she veered her mood.

"Yes, I passed our old elevator boy on the street a few months ago," she remarked casually, stooping to pat the mastiff's head. "I remembered his face, too, though it had been over a decade since I saw him."

The man's face was rueful as he noted appreciation of her tactics.

Below them was the broad expanse of the Hudson, scintillating as a sapphire in the glow of the summer afternoon. A yachting party steaming up river waved hats and handkerchiefs at them in pure good fellowship. It seemed good to be alive. Temple pulled two chairs under the shade of the trees, and they sat down. In the distance the cliffs of the Palisades rose and beckoned alluringly.

"Do you know what I used to call them, those cliffs?" said he, seeing his companion's eyes upon them. "My enchanted palaces. When I was a child the palace of enchantment meant the future, the mysterious, ineffable future when I should be grown up, when I should be a man, when the world would be my garden, the world and life and all their riches mine to explore, to adventure in. And, oh, the people by whom the world and the future were inhabited, the cavaliering knights, the lovely princesses! Love and glory and all manner of romance. I had them for the wishing. Did you ever have such an enchanted palace, Miss Dale?" asked he whimsically.

"Yes," acquiesced she softly, falling in with his mood, the sympathetic bond which always asserted itself when she was not on guard, drawing her once again. "Oh, yes; I, too, had my enchanted palace, a many-planned palace built of gold and silver, ivory, alabaster and mother of pearl; the fountains in its courts ran with perfumed waters." Her voice trailed off dreamily, and Temple thrilled with the music of it. "And its pleasure was an orchard of pomegranates. One had no need to spare one's colors, you know." She turned to him with an adorable smile.

"I know." He was at one with her now, responding intuitively to the play of her emotions. "And the stars left their courses to fight for you, and the winds of heaven vied with each other to prosper your galleons—wasn't it like that?" He looked at her; she was scarcely listening; she was watching the sunlight catching on the tops of the Palisades. It was just as well; he was safer in his inspection of her so.

"Uh-huh! Like that," she said, her ears mechanically following his words. "I dare say," she went on musingly, "it must be that we pass the enchanted palace while we are asleep. Surely, at first, it is before us—we can see it glistening in the distance, like the peaks yonder. We shall reach it tomorrow, next month, next year. And then one morning we wake up and—and it is behind us. We've passed it, and we can't turn back. We must go on." Her voice ended in a little half sob.

The sight of a tear trembling on her lashes cost Burton Temple a hundred conflicts with himself. He felt a sudden warmth behind his eyes and in his throat. All he did, however, was to look big, hold his tongue and envy the dead their enforced responsibility.

"I—I'm not often agitated," said Anna, rising, with an odd, starchy smile, "and you must pardon me that display of over-sentiment." But before he could have spoken: "I must really go in now. I've promised Mrs. Mason to play a game of piquet, or cribbage, or something," she faltered. So Temple, elaborately commiserating, escorted her up the red gravel path.

Anna was growing excessively uneasy. For quite two hours now she'd been anxiously expecting Mrs. Mason's return from Westfield. What could be the matter? At the very least it must be the measles. Finally, however, her elder friend came in smilingly, disarming all fears.

"And how's the new nurse getting on with them? Does she make Robbie wear his rubbers on wet days? Is his cold quite gone? Is Harold's finger well again? Have they hid that horrid penknife?" Anna was untying Mrs. Mason's veil and pouring out her questions in a torrent.

Mrs. Mason assured her that the boys were both well and happy, that the new nurse was doing beautifully and that, except for a few hours when the rascals had her locked in the chicken house, she was having a fine time.

"Oh, she won't mind an inconsequential thing like the chicken house," laughed Anna, handing Mrs. Mason her veil pins, "when once she's used to those boys. They looked their mother in one day, and I had to spank them, poor little dears. Oh, but I'm sick with longing for them—sick!"

"I know, dearie," soothed Mrs. Mason, patting her on the back. "But I've something else to tell you. You couldn't guess why I was so late coming back? No? Well, I've been up to see Robert."

"You have?" Anna started never so slightly. "Is—he well? Is he keeping up? What did he think about my being here?"

"Oh, he's well, and he's keeping up. They're all very good to him. They feel he is up there through a miscarriage of justice. They treat him kindly. They've made him what they call a 'trusty.'"

Anna was listening with strained attention.

"You explained to him, didn't you, Mrs. Mason? You made it clear just why I left home? You made him understand that I am in a position here to find out the truth that will convict the man who has done this thing?"

Mrs. Mason plucked several imaginary threads off her skirts to hide her confusion.

"At first, you know," went on Anna, "I thought it best not to let him know about my having left home. I knew he would worry about the boys. But a few days ago I managed to get him word. I felt the time had come. And now, what does he say?"

Mrs. Mason still faltered. Her conscience would not permit her to tell less than the whole truth; nevertheless, she longed for some fashion in which to put it gently.

"Well, he said, dear—be turned white and said he didn't want you to remain in this house. Said it didn't look quite right; that he'd rather have you home with the children than here in Temple's house."

Anna smiled indulgently. "Poor boy! He's afraid the work will prove too hard for me. It won't. I'll fasten the crime yet, though it may break my heart." The final words were almost choked. She walked across to the window and stood staring out at the grim prison there. It was a little trick she had learned whenever she wished to steel herself in the fight she had undertaken. Presently she turned back—a dumb, pathetic perplexity in each gray eye.

"Oh, if I could get back to the condition in which I entered this house—the clear air where there are no obscurities, no mysteries!"

She spoke half to herself, but the words fell like little whips on Mrs. Mason's ears.

"What obscurities, what mysteries are you talking of?" she said sternly. "I don't understand."

"No more do I—no more do I!" Anna twisted and untwisted her hands in silence for a moment. "Only this I know," she said at last. "When I came here I could harden my heart against the man with whom I had come to wage war. I could continually remember his responsibility for Robert's imprisonment. Oh, I could fight fairly and squarely. But now—"

"It's strange," she went on reflectively—"strange. Now I always have to bring myself up with a deliberate effort. I have to think to hate him—I don't hate him intuitively any more. There's something about him"—her voice softened oddly—"I can't describe it. He's strong, somehow. He's big and deep and earnest and illimitably strong. He draws one."

Osler isn't the only man who turns down old age. In the business world the "young man" is always the one who picks the plums. It is an age of "new thought," "new talent," etc., and the old man is passed by in the race.

One of the first signs of coming age is the appearance of gray hairs. When you see them, act promptly. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy will correct this sign, which so often deceives people into thinking that age is really upon them. It is a well known fact that Sage and Sulphur will darken the hair. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur combines these old-time remedies with other agents, which remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize the druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

Don't look old before your time. Get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur today, and see what an improvement it will make in the appearance of your hair.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special agents, Koch Pharmacy.

By official record the men serving in the Union army and navy during the civil war numbered 2,213,265. There are now on the pension rolls 529,884 of this number. The deaths among them last year were 35,243. The average age of the survivors at present is 70 years.

Secretary Meyer says the United States spends ten million dollars a month on its navy. This has been the rate for the past five years, thus aggregating the enormous sum of $600,000,000.

Is the World Growing Better?

Many things go to prove that it is. The way thousands are trying to help others is proof. Among them is Mrs. W. W. Gould of Pittsfield, N. H. Finding good health by taking Electric Bitters, she now advises other sufferers, everywhere, to take them. "For years I suffered with stomach and kidney trouble," she writes. "Every medicine I used failed till I took Electric Bitters. But this great remedy helped me wonderfully." They'll help any woman. They're the best tonic and finest liver and kidney remedy that's made. Try them. You'll see. 50c at the Orear-Henry Drug Co.

No one has ever made a salve, ointment or balm to compare with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the one perfect healer of cuts, corns, ulcers, bruises, sores, scalds, boils, ulcers, eczema, salt rheum. For sore eyes, cold sores, chapped hands or sprains it's supreme. Unrivalled for piles. Try it. Only 25c at the Orear-Henry Drug company.

LIVED ON RAW EGGS

Mr. Richard's Experience With Different Diets. Peaches and Buttermilk for Three Years.

Cecilton, Md.—Mr. George Richards, of this place, during the past 12 years, has probably tried more different diets than the average person would ever use in a lifetime.

What he has to say about his experiments, must therefore be highly interesting to anyone suffering from indigestion or stomach troubles of any kind.

He says: "For more than 12 years I suffered with stomach troubles, and paid hundreds of dollars for doctor bills and medicines. I was also operated on for piles."

I lived on dried peaches and buttermilk for nearly three years. The only thing that would not give me pain was raw eggs.

I was a physical wreck. I could not sleep, and was as near crazy as a man could well be.

I must say that after taking two 25-cent packages of Theodor's Black-Draught, it did me more good than all I ever spent for other medicines.

I have been working daily on the farm ever since, and I am as hard as iron. This purely vegetable remedy has been in successful use for more than 70 years. Try it. But be sure that it's "Theodor's."
